Marathon Party Was Loud, Raucous, Sunny, and Fun

Chair Tom Maxwell outdid himself with the planning and the noisemakers. Tony Celebreezi's DJ's played some good tunes loudly, and the runners seemed to be appreciative. Plus, it turned out to be a warm, sunny day. What more could you ask for in a Marathon Party?

Area Commission Will Give Our Society a Voice for the Betterment of Harrison West

By Rob Harris

In view of recent proposals for large-scale development in our neighborhood, the Society should consider ways to better control and direct growth in Harrison West. The Society's first effort should be to form an Area Commission.

Area Commissions are not Architectural Review Commissions, as they do not deal with architectural details or aesthetic choice. Rather, an Area Commission will give Harrison West an advisory voice in the decision-making process that affects our neighborhood development. An Area Commission will give Harrison West more political and legal power than the Society or any individual has alone. And an Area Commission will give the Society an active role in the future planning and development of our neighborhood.

To gain this advisory voice on issues that affect our daily lives, the Society should petition Council to establish a Commission Area. The Society will need to form an advisory committee, provide a statement of by-laws, and obtain supporting resident signatures. The commission area would be established in the same manner that the Harrison West Society boundaries have been.

The advisory committee will make recommendations for commission members that will represent our neighborhood. No less than seven members, but not to exceed twenty-one should be selected. The Mayor appoints the commissioners with the concurrence of council. The functions and duties of an area commission are advisory and do not invalidate actions of City Council.

Eadie Gourmet Eats Out

We had enough food on the table, but the Palak Pakore kept intriguing me. Ram told us it is a light appetizer Indian ladies eat at tea, and I had to try it. It's fresh spinach dipped in chickpea batter spiced with what tasted like a mild curry, then deep fried. It proved to be a delicate mound of deep green spinach leaves coated in a hearty crust that was not at all greasy. Batter-fried spinach – who would have imagined it would taste so good?

If you wish to experiment with Indian food, Sher-E-Punjab is a good place to start. Prices are reasonable, the food is excellent, and the Punjabi specialities are a treat.

We were so full, we skipped dessert.

Eadie Gourmet Eats Out at Sher-E- Punjab

by Veda Gilp

Tim Bledsoe, Rob Harris, and I took advantage of a cold Sunday evening recently to explore Indian comfort food at Sher-E-Punjab in Kenny Square.

You should eat here. Even the vegetarian dishes are robust. For instance, I ordered Saag Paneer, since I wanted something different. This Punjab speciality is fresh spinach and homemade cheese cubes cooked with cream curry sauce. When I saw the dish, I shuddered – it looked like every bowl of cheap canned spinach I’d ever seen. But I had ordered it, so I would eat it. WOW! Looks are deceiving. Creamed with mild curry, garlic, and ginger, the fresh spinach delighted the taste buds. The cubes of cheese were mild and tasty, making the dish rich and hearty without being overpowering.

The restaurant owner, Ram Sabherwal, confided that his wife’s favorite down-home food was Turka Dal Punjabi, so we ordered that. It doesn’t seem that spiced black lentils cooked in a clay oven should taste so good, but they do. Tim and Rob are way too gentlemanly to fight a guest for food, but not a single lentil remained when we finished.

Chicken Makhani Masala was tender cubes of marinated chicken luxuriating in a buttery tomato sauce which owed its simple excellence to just a few Indian spices. I’m no expert on Indian Masalas, but this was tasty indeed.
